

Announcement

We are pleased to announce...

We recently launched www.techport.com, an information and support center that puts us at your fingertips 24/7. The site includes information about our one-stop IT services including technology consultation, project management, Microsoft solutions, back-up and disaster recovery planning, and web development.

We are especially pleased to introduce our new customer portal. This online community includes public forums, tips and tricks, and articles that can help you solve IT problems and learn about the latest technology. You can also ask questions, share information, and make suggestions for article topics.

Our goal is to provide IT solutions that (a) help your business reach its maximum potential and (b) give you peace of mind. We will use our expertise to efficiently manage your IT processes so you will have more time for your customers and other business matters.

We invite you to visit techport.com where you can review our comprehensive array of services, explore our customer portal, and sign up for a customer account that will allow you to receive customized support.

Katherine Williams

Writing Portfolio

Web site announcement written for a client; identity changed to protect privacy